Course Description: Forcible Entry – Lost Art of the Irons

Session Type: 4 hour Theory and Hands-On Program

How a firefighter gains access/egress through a secured opening on a structure can be time consuming and dangerous if proper techniques are not utilized. With the development of hydraulic forcible entry tools, forcible entry using irons (i.e. flat head axe and halligan) is quickly becoming a lost “art”. The Lost Art of the Irons is a 4 hour program designed to provide candidates with an understanding of the science behind forcible entry techniques, modern requirements for forcible entry, door size-up, and an inventory of single and multi-person breach techniques. The hands on component of this training places the tools in the hands of every candidate as they each walk through the various forcible entry techniques necessary for safe and effective fireground operations Training that is attainable, applicable and (perhaps most importantly) retrievable when seconds count....
